

Field Rhythms - How Organic Grain Farmers Move Through the Seasons

February 10th 6:00-7:30 PM CT

About This Session

Get an inside look at what a full year of organic grain farming really looks like. Hans Bishop of PrairiErth Farm and Seneca Murley, Farm Manager at Clarkson Farm, will walk through the rhythms, decisions, and workloads that shape their seasons, one focused on food-grade grains and one working with commodity markets. Come see how two farms navigate planning, planting, management, and harvest in very different systems.

About the Series

This webinar is part of the 2025 Organic Grain Winter Webinar Series, a collection of practical, farmer-focused sessions designed to support growers through the organic transition and beyond. Each session features boots-on-the-ground farmers, consultants, and technical experts sharing tools, strategies, and lessons learned from the field. You can register for the full series or choose the topics most relevant to your operation.

Cost & Access

This webinar is $10. A Zoom link and reminder will be emailed to all registered participants.

Speaker Details

Seneca Murley is the Organic Farm Manager of Lynn Clarkson Farm in Cerro Gordo, Illinois. She manages operations, business and certification requirements, finances, marketing and sales. Seneca lives and manages the farm while living in Colorado with her family and periodically commuting to Illinois. Hans Bishop raises 750 acres of transitional and organic corn, soybeans and wheat on PrairiErth Farm in Atlanta, Illinois.
